I Introduction

The third set of elections to the National Assembly for Wales took place on Thursday, 3 May 2007, simultaneously with the Scottish Parliament elections and local authority elections in England and Scotland.¹

The electoral system for electing members of the National Assembly is known as the Additional Member System. Voters are given two ballot papers. The first is used to elect each of 40 constituency Assembly Members (AMs) under the traditional first-past-the-post system. The second ballot paper is used to elect four AMs from each of five electoral regions. These additional members are elected so that the total representation from each geographical area, including those members elected under first-past-the-post, corresponds as closely as possible with the share of the votes cast for each political party in the region.²

Following a review by the Boundary Commission for Wales the boundaries of Assembly constituencies and electoral regions were changed. These changes came into force for the 2007 Assembly elections. The most significant boundary changes took place in North Wales where three new constituencies were established (Aberconwy, Arfon, and Dwyfor Meirionnydd) in place of the constituencies of Conwy, Caernarfon, and Meirionnydd Nant Conwy. The North Wales and Mid and West Wales electoral regions were reconfigured to reflect changes to constituency boundaries. These constituency boundaries will be used for the next UK parliamentary elections.

Data sources

Votes

The number of votes cast for each candidate is as reported by the BBC. These data have been verified by the Library with those published by the National Assembly for Wales and local authorities.

Turnout

Election day turnout figures have been calculated as total valid votes as a proportion of eligible electors on election day (3 May 2007). These electorates have been verified by the Library using data published as part of the declaration of constituency and regional ballot results available on local authority websites or, where these were not published, by direct contact with returning officers. Consequently, turnout figures may vary from those published elsewhere.

Labour gained the highest share of the vote (30.9%), both in the constituency (32.2%) and regional (29.6%) ballots. Labour also secured the highest number of seats (26), down by four seats compared with the 2003 elections. Labour's share of the vote was down by 7.0% points in the regional ballot and by 7.8% points in the constituency ballot. In most constituencies, Labour's vote share fell, although it improved its share in Cardiff Central by 2.0% points. In Blaenau Gwent the party's vote share fell by 38.9% points. Labour's highest absolute majority was recorded in Ogmore (7,900 votes).

Plaid Cymru are the second largest party in the Assembly with 15 seats, an increase of 3 seats compared to 2003. The party polled 21.7% of the vote overall. Plaid's vote share rose by 1.2% points in both the constituency and regional ballots. However, in Swansea West, Plaid's vote share fell by 7.6% points. Its highest absolute majority was recorded in Dwyfor Meirionnydd (8,868 votes), where the party secured 59.7% of the vote.

The Conservatives polled 21.9% of the vote, up by 2.4% points compared to 2003, gaining one seat and taking their total representation in the Assembly to 12 Assembly Members. The Conservatives' share of the vote in the regional ballot was 2.2% points higher than in 2003, also up by 2.4% points in the constituency ballot. The Conservatives' share of the vote increased most significantly in Clwyd South (up by 10.7% points compared to 2003), although in Ynys Mon its vote share fell by 15.5% points. The Conservatives' highest absolute majority was recorded in Monmouth (8,469 votes).

The Liberal Democrats' overall share of the vote fell marginally by 0.1% points. The party continues to hold six seats in the Assembly. In the regional ballot, the Liberal Democrats' share of the vote decreased by 1.0% points while in the constituency ballot their share rose by 0.6% points. The party's share of the vote increased by 13.2% points in Pontypridd, but fell by 6.7% points in Alyn and Deeside. The party's highest absolute majority was recorded in Cardiff Central (6,565 votes).

The United Kingdom Independence Party fielded 33 candidates, none of whom were elected in either the regional or constituency ballots. Overall, UKIP received 56,537 votes and the party's share of the vote was 2.9%. In the Vale of Glamorgan, UKIP obtained 2,310 votes (6.9% of the votes) while in Ynys Mon the party's share was 3.1% (833 votes). In the regional ballot, UKIP polled their highest vote share in South Wales East (5.0%) and their lowest in South Wales West (3.6%).

The British National Party fielded 20 candidates in the regional ballot and none in the constituency ballot. The party obtained 42,197 votes overall, representing 5.1% of total regional votes.

The average overall turnout across the constituencies was 43.6%, up by 5.2% points compared with the 2003 Assembly elections. Turnout was highest in Carmarthenshire and East Dinefwr (55.7%) and lowest in Swansea East (35.0%). Turnout was generally higher in the Mid and West Wales region where it exceeded 45.0% in all constituencies. Turnout was lowest in South Wales West where it averaged 40.3%. Compared with the 2003 Assembly elections, turnout rose in all constituencies, with the exception of Rhondda where it fell by 3.5% points.

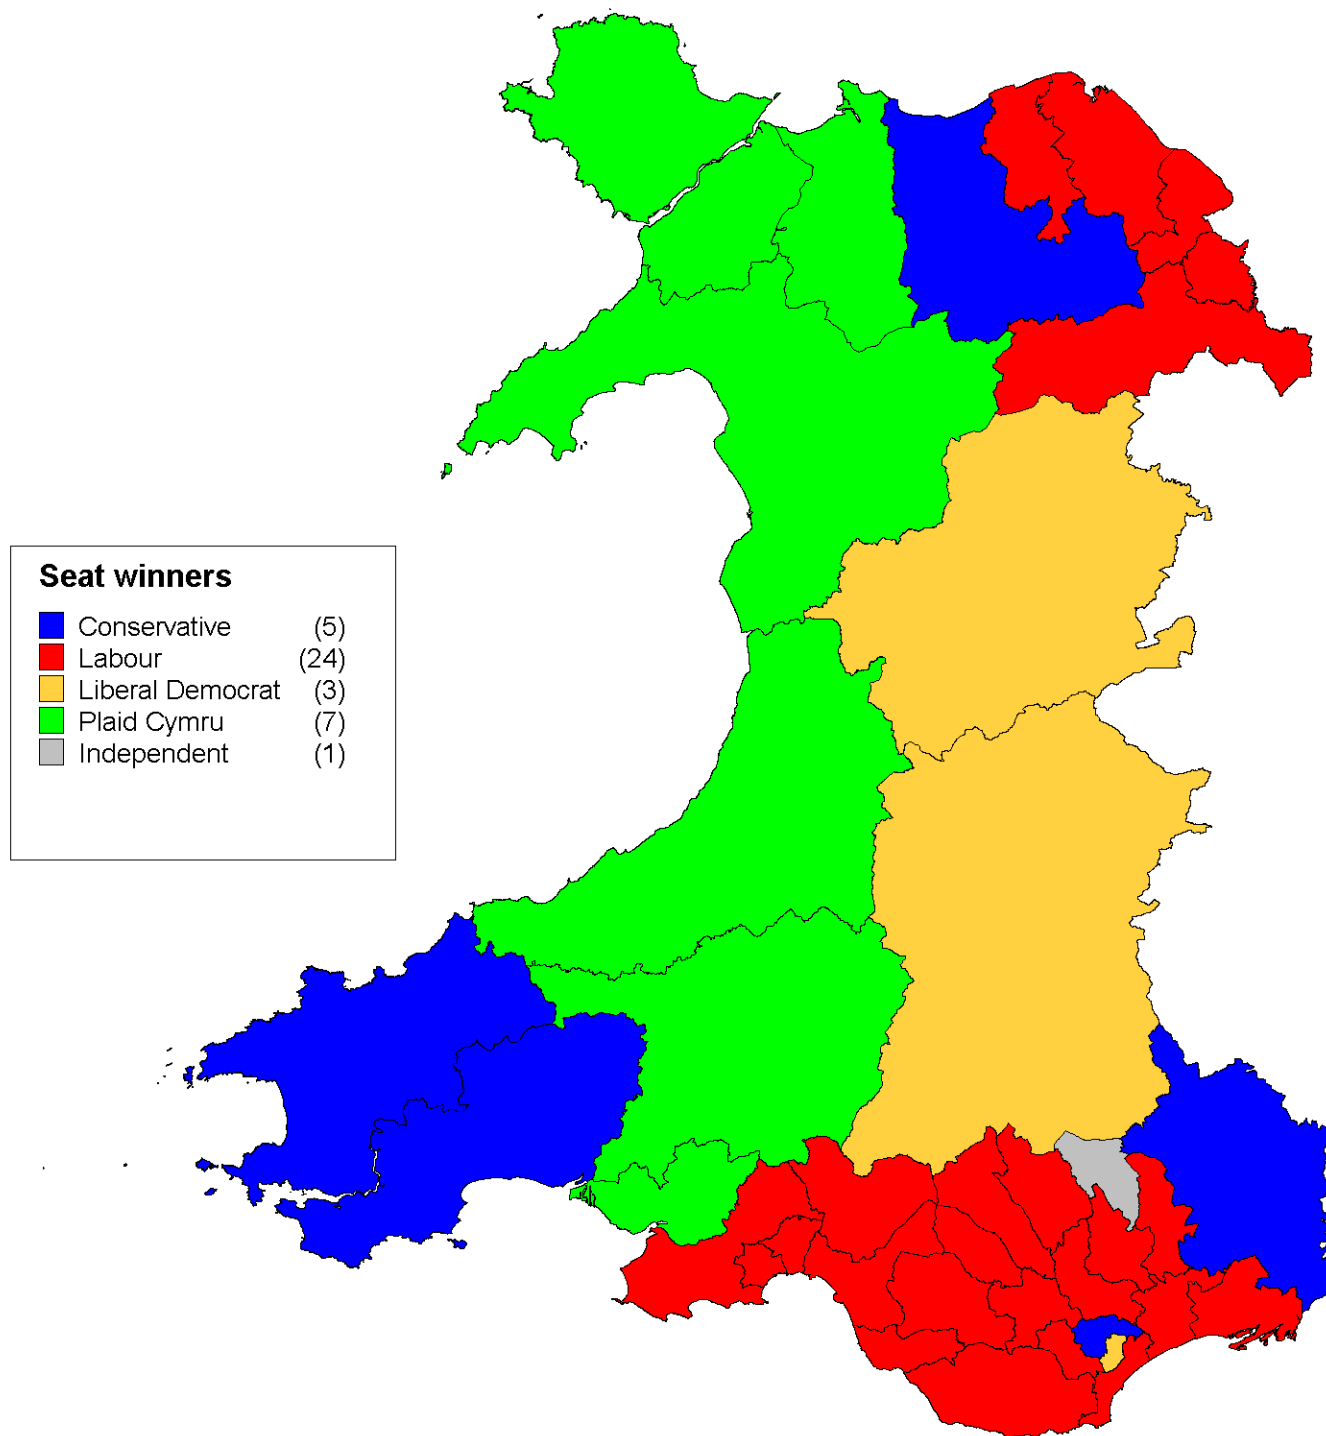

The number of women Assembly Members fell by two from 30 in 2003 to 28 in 2007, accounting for 47% of all AM's, a higher proportion than most of the national parliaments abroad which report their data to the Inter-Parliamentary Union.³ Rwanda (48.8%) and Sweden (47.3%) are the only parliaments to rank higher than Wales. The number of women in the National Assembly also compares favourably with the number of female MPs in the House of Commons (127 women MPs, 19.7%) and MSPs in the Scottish Parliament in the recent election (43 MSPs, 33.3%).
