Dear Matt,

Re. Conditions in detention for people with learning disabilities or autism

Thank you for your letter dated 26th November in which you explained the scope and timetable of the Care Quality Commission’s investigation into issues at Assessment and Treatment Units.

On 12th December, the Committee heard from people with learning disabilities who have been detained, and from family members of people with autism who have been detained. We heard evidence of two perverse incentives that contribute to people being detained in institutions that are inappropriate for their needs, and we would like your views on these issues:

- We were told that the division between NHS funding and local authority funding continues to inhibit placement in, and transfer to, community-based care. This is also not a good use of public money, given that community-based care is often less expensive than inpatient care.

- We were told that private providers have a vested interest in retaining individuals in detention, in preference to care arrangements being made that are more appropriate for the individuals and more cost-effective for public funders.

We will be raising these issues with the CQC and NHS England on 9th January. It will also be helpful to have your views, so I ask that you reply to this letter by Monday 21st January.

We will continue to monitor the issues with the care of those with learning disabilities and / or autism, and we will press Government to ensure that their human rights are upheld.

Yours sincerely,

Harriet
