Food
Hygiene
Standards

Tuesday 21st April 2009
9.30 – 10.30am
Jubilee Room, Westminster Hall
Palace of Westminster

Professor Hugh Pennington chaired the inquiry into the 2005 E. coli O157 outbreak in South Wales. The outbreak was the second largest in the UK, affecting around 150 people and resulting in the death of one schoolboy. The seminar will focus on the lessons to be learned from that outbreak, and consider how the industry can best respond. There will be two short presentations, followed by a question and answer session chaired by Lord Rea.
Agenda

Introduction

Lord Rea, Chair of the Associate Parliamentary Food and Health Forum

Lessons to be learned from the E coli outbreak in South Wales in 2005

Professor Hugh Pennington

Training and education in food safety - what are the needs

Dr Peter McClure, Institute of Food Science and Technology