

What is the Authorised Retention and Disposal Policy?

The Authorised Retention and Disposal Policy (ARDP) is Parliament's policy on the retention, destruction and archiving of its information, regardless of the media on which it is held. It supports the compliance of both Houses with legislation including the UK Data Protection Act 2018 and the Freedom of Information Act 2000, as well as national and international standards. The Disposal Policy is the result of wide consultation amongst staff with responsibility for each function and its related activities and is approved by the accounting officers of both Houses (the Clerk of the Parliaments and the Clerk of the House of Commons).

How the Disposal Policy works

To locate the disposal instruction for specific information, the Authorised Retention and Disposal Policy is structured according to the corporate file plan known as the Classification Scheme for Parliamentary Records. Each parliamentary function is a Keyword 1 and for each of these there is a short scope note explaining what the term covers.

Under each function there is a table which is divided into the lower terms relating to that function. Keyword 2, represents the activity being carried out as part of the Keyword 1 function. Lower level descriptors (at Keyword 3 and 4) are used to further define the subject content of the activities. These terms are shown in the first three columns of the table.

Examples of the type of information to be stored within each disposal class are provided in the fourth column of the table. Details of how long information should be retained, and how it should be disposed of is listed in the fifth column. A reason for this retention period is provided in the sixth column, including business, historical and legislative factors.

Disposal of information

Information should be retained only for as long as it is required to support both Houses in meeting their business requirements and legal obligations: for reference or accountability purposes, to comply with regulatory requirements or to protect legal and other rights and interests. At the end of that time, information will either be destroyed or retained permanently by the Parliamentary Archives.

Retention of information for longer than periods stated

It is recommended that information is disposed of as close as possible to the disposal date stated. There are a number of reasons for this:

- it is easier to identify what information is, or is not, available if the Disposal Policy is followed
- it is easier to pinpoint important information if redundant information has been removed
- accommodation (either on a server or in a building) can be used more efficiently
- principle 5 of the UK Data Protection Act 2018 states that personal data shall be kept for no longer than necessary
- if a record exists in any form, by whomever, it is discoverable under the UK Data Protection Act 2018 and Freedom of Information Acts.

There are exceptions to this recommendation. For example, information relevant to a potential or actual legal dispute must be retained for at least 6 years after any action is complete, or until it becomes clear that no further action is being taken.

Format of information

Disposal instructions apply to all information in whatever format; including electronic material held on storage media, hard drives, shared servers and as e-mail attachments. Where information is held electronically within a database or other system, procedures must be put in place to ensure the systematic and authorised destruction or archiving of this material in accordance with the disposal instructions outlined in the ARDP.
